W. VAN DE VELDE.

- 61 A VIEW ON THE RIVER Y, during a calm, with a number of vessels, most of which have their sails up; among them, and near the front, is one with a single mast, her main and jib sails up, and carrying guns; a salute is being fired from her larboard side. On the same line, and in the centre, is a row-boat full of figures, and near the side is a passage-boat, laden with passengers and cattle; beyond these are a yacht, a coaster and many other vessels receding in gradation; the effect of early morning pervades the scene

62 A VIEW ON A CANAL IN WINTER. The dreary scene presents on the left a large and low cottage, the thatch of which extends over the water, forming a covering to a boat ; in front of the house are four leafless trees, and a boat lying near a gate ; on the opposite side are a boat with a mast and yards, and a cottage backed by trees ; some logs of wood lie on the ice in front ; three men, a boy and a woman are on the ice, one of the former is playing at ball, and a girl stands on a platform at the side of the river, which is crossed in the second distance by a bridge ; beyond these are seen a cottage and the low country of Holland ; a cloudy sky, surcharged with snow, contributes to the general affect of the cold and solitary season

640.10.
106 THE STEM OF JESSE. St. Anne seated on a throne in a crimson drapery and white head-dress, her hand resting on the shoulder of the Virgin, who is seated at her feet nursing the Infant, who is holding a rosary; David holding a harp on the left, and Solomon on the right, holding a sceptre; a donor kneeling in prayer on either side: sixteen half-length figures of patriarchs, apostles, and evangelists spring from flowers on the branches of a tree, which springs from the back of the throne of St. Anne, with gold background Jeffrey.

The background was blue till 1857, when Dr. Waagen discovered the gold beneath it, and advised the removal of the surface colour.

"This is the finest work I have seen by that unknown master who painted the Baptism of Christ in the collection of the Academy at Bruges, there wrongly ascribed to Memling. We thus see this subject of the Stem of Jesse, which was so popular in the middle ages, here once more repeated towards the termination of that period, with some arbitrary alterations, it is true, but with the purest and most elevated religious feeling at the same time; the heads, though somewhat similar in character, display a degree of beauty, and the hands and cast of the drapery a knowledge which is quite astonishing. The head of St. John the Evangelist, one of the half-figures, is especially of the rarest delicacy; although the colouring of the flesh and drapery is cool, yet a refined harmony pervades the whole picture. The superiority of the drawing and the greater delicacy with which every portion is rendered, prove that this picture was executed somewhat later than that in Bruges."—WAAGEN.
